I FEARED 'ENDER MY VOICE

AS an actor and singer, having a good voice is pretty important for former EastEnders star JON PARTRIDGE.

But the actor, best known for playing Walford's Christian Clarke, says he nearly lost it completely after a growth was discovered on his vocal cords.

Jon said: "I woke up one day and I couldn't speak.

"It was in the middle of Covid so it took a while for them to find out what was wrong as no one wanted to look in someone's mouth at that point.

"They found a cyst and removed it but I could have been left unable to speak, let alone sing, for the rest of my life."

The condition required major surgery and vocal rest for four months, but thankfully Jon recovered in time to start his current run of performances at Proud Cabaret in London.
